NEW STORIES OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN BY JOURNAL READERS

Wonderful Life of Martyred President is Shown in All Its Aspects by Old Subscribers Who Saw and Talked to Him

The wonderful life-story of Abraham Lincoln is told in The Journal today by its old subscribers who walked with the great earnest pastor on his journey from the obscure legal circuits of rural Illinois to the capital of the nation, to become its chief magistrate as its most original hero.

LINCOLN AND EDITOR FRIENDS

To these it conveyed from day to day the life of the great man which found Abraham Lincoln in obscure and raised him to the position of the greatest world-character of the century.

Lincoln and The Journal became closely associated through his friendship for one of the early editors, Charles L. Whitney. In the country's fourfold revival of his career, it fell to Billie Whitney's lot to perform an honorable service for Lincoln by making possible the debates with Douglas which elevated him from a local notoriety to a national character.

When Lincoln made a spokesman, The Journal made the people hear. They heeded a changing. The Journal took up the cause. Naturally this editorial policy drew to its patronage thousands of the friends of Lincoln.
